Physical Description:

This collection of papers was purchased by the Museum from Fred Rouleau, local dealer. Although it has some integrity as a collection, it is also probably a collection of assorted papers that came to Rouleau's hand over a period of time. The largest number of related papers seem to be those of Captain Charles Thompson of Kennebunk, thus the collection has been given his name.

The papers cover a wide geographic area and time span. While a majority of the papers are of Kennebunk people and ships, there are also papers from other Maine towns (even as far afield as Bangor), as well as papers from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, even Illinois. It is possible they came to Thompson's hand through his business dealings, but not certain. An attempt has been made to break them down and store them logically, as groups of papers relating to certain local people or ships are together, papers from assorted Maine towns are together, papers of a legal nature (which have no other cohesion) are together. In date the papers range from 1773 to 1916. The bulk falls within the mid-19th century.

The collection is stored in two boxes with a few oversize or specialized items stored elsewhere, as indicated in the box and folder breakdown. The collection's acquisition number is 83.15.
