Physical Description:

This collection is made up of the personal research papers of George A. Gilpatric, a Kennebunk native with an interest in local history. Gilpatric's years of collecting data on local people, places, and events was the basis for the publication in 1935 of a brief history, The Village of Kennebunk, Maine. In 1939 that history was republished with supplementary material as Kennebunk History. The collection includes not only Gilpatric's notebooks, scrapbooks, and personal annotated copies of other Kennebunk histories (Bourne and Remich), but also some primary material, particularly papers of the Gilpatric family. This material is of interest because it contains information about local militia activities and the church and mills.

This collection is a good source of local genealogy even though much of the family information Gilpatric collected came from local published histories. Yet he brought it together in essay form and with his thoughts on reliability, etc. He is particularly strong on families related to the Gilpatric family (such as the Mitchell family).

Gilpatric was a devoted member of the Masons and I.O.O.F., serving as historian and record keeper for the local chapters, and functioning as an officer on a state level. The personal records of local members of York Lodge, No. 22, E. & A. Masons, and Mousam Lodge, No. 26, I.O.O.F. were largely compiled by Gilpatric, as were general histories of these organizations. Much of that material is included in this collection.

Collection #48 will be a useful source of information for the researcher interested in Kennebunk, the people, and the buildings, who is willing to spend the time sifting through Gilpatric's handwritten notes, confusing compilations of essays, and his duplication of effort. His compilations of all of the above have essentially been left as he arranged them, although steel nuts and bolts which held his notebooks together have been removed. The paper he worked with is highly acidic, and at some point this collection should be photocopied on acid free paper.

The materials in the collection come from three sources: Gilpatric himself, who gave some of his research materials to the founder of the Brick Store Museum, Edith Barry. (She, in turn, made typescripts of some of this material and these are part of the collection too); from his daughter, Mrs. Robert Beals; and from his great-grandson, Richard Bedard of Kennebunk. The acquisition numbers are 1269-79 and 64.5.122-26; 133-53; 158-64; 174-197; 200-211; 431-553. One or two other acquisitions that relate to George A. Gilpatric have been added to this collection such as #1924.

It should be noted that many photographs that should be part of this collection, and a few other items, are not. The material was not originally catalogued as a Gilpatric Collection, but “blasted” into the Museum’s photograph, genealogy, and local history files. In the effort to bring everything back into a collection bearing its owner’s name (because therein, in part, lies its significance), some items, such as the photographs, which had already been catalogued with inventory numbers, have been left under that arrangement.

This is an interesting and useful collection, which should be indexed for better retrieval of the information it contains.

Gilpatrick Rites Held At Kennebunk, Maine

George Alden Gilpatrick, 94, died Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Robert Beale, at Hampden-Sydney. He had been confined to his bed for the past several weeks following a fall.

Prominent in fraternal circles in Maine, he had been a member of the York Masonic lodge in Kennebunk since 1873, and had occupied almost every important Masonic office in that state. He was a past grand master of the Odd Fellows in Maine. Much interested in his native state, he was author of two volumes on Maine local history. Full Masonic honors were accorded him at the funeral services.

The body was taken to his former home for funeral services at the First Congregational church, Kennebunk, Maine, and burial there. In addition to his daughter, he is survived by a son, William S. Gilpatrick of Kennebunk.

For several years he has made his home with his daughter, moving to Hampden - Sydney from Lynchburg.

Dr. and Mrs. Beale accompanied the body to Maine, where the funeral was held on Monday. They returned to Hampden-Sydney on Wednesday.
